

Colleen Tenan, MD

Dr. Tenan graduated from Yale University with a Bachelor of Arts in economics. She received her medical degree from New York University School of Medicine, where she was awarded the NYU Healthcare Policy Award for outstanding contribution to the Public Health Department. She completed her residency training at New York Presbyterian Hospital/Weill Cornell Medical College, where she received specialized training in primary care and outpatient medicine. She is currently a Summus MD at Summus as well as Vice President, Medical Director at Javara, an integrated research organization focused on expanding access to clinical trials. Prior to her role at Javara, she was an internal medicine physician at WestMed Medical Group in New York.

In addition to the management of chronic conditions, Dr. Tenan is board certified in Obesity Medicine. Her additional interests include preventive medicine, women's health, heart health, and LGBTQIA+ healthcare. She is a member of the American College of Physicians and a diplomate of the American Board of Obesity Medicine. She is passionate about empowering and educating her patients on cardiovascular disease prevention through lifestyle modifications.